

Children's Health Insurance Program

The Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) provides health insurance coverage for children in families whose income, although modest, is above the threshold to qualify for Medicaid. Each state can set its own eligibility threshold, but generally it falls between 138 percent and 300 percent of the federal poverty guidelines. Like Medicaid, CHIP is administered by the states within broad federal guidelines. Unlike Medicaid, however, CHIP has a fixed nationwide limit on federal spending.

- Title XXI of the Social Security Act provides funding through September 2027. Through 2023, budget authority for the program is set by statute. From 2023 to 2027, the budget authority is set equal to the sums needed to fund the allotments. After 2027, consistent with section 257 of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, CBO's baseline reflects the assumption that annual funding for the program will continue at $15.3 billion, based on the amount of budget authority available in 2027.
- Amounts represent the number of beneficiaries enrolled on an average monthly basis in the 50 states and the District of Columbia but exclude enrollment in the U.S. territories.
- States receive annual allotments from the total program budget authority based on a formula in title XXI of the Social Security Act. States have two years to spend the funds from the annual allotments, and most states have funds available from the prior fiscal year's allotment at the start of a new fiscal year. In addition, any allotment funds that are not spent by the end of the two-year period of availability are placed in a redistribution fund that may be distributed to states that exhaust all of their allotment funds before the end of the two-year period.
